OHIO ACADEMY OF HISTORY NEWSLETTER

Vol. XXIII, No. 3

Message to The Academy

Public higher education in Ohio has had a difficult spring and summer. George Voinovich forced a 170 million-dollar cut from the approximately 1.5 billion-dollar higher education budget for the fiscal year 1993. Another 102 million dollars have been previously eliminated in two earlier cuts. The results have not been pleasant. For example, Ohio State University lost 45 million dollars in state appropriations. It will increase tuition 231 dollars a year. Throughout the state the story is the same - decreased state money, steep tuition increases, fewer classes offered, larger classes, faculty cuts and hiring freezes, and sagging institutional morale. Joseph A. Steger, president of the University of Cincinnati, said: "What we are witnessing is the abandonment of public higher education."

The public universities and colleges have demanding challenges. Demographically, they are only two years from the bottom of the high decline of traditional-age students who make up the vast majority of these institutions' first-year classes. The pressures of disappearing students have been most marked in sharply escalated tuition increases accompanied by larger need-based financial aid packages that have put many private school budgets on the critical care lists as they worked to keep enrollment stable and to maintain academic standards. It is little comfort that America's best private universities; such as, Stanford, Harvard, John Hopkins, Yale, and Columbia, have had widely publicized budgetary problems that resulted in the same pattern we see in Ohio.

Nevertheless, in the midst of some of the most turbulent years in higher education history, I can deliver good news about our little platoon of scholar-teachers, and history professionals - the Ohio Academy of History. The Academy is alive and well in the middle of these challenges and unpleasant changes. We have over 700 members who enjoy our modest services for a remarkable small annual fee. We balance our budget every year with no accounting tricks. For well over a half century the Academy has provided an annual meeting that has allowed history scholars of all kinds in Ohio to display their expertise. For many years the Academy has taken notice each year of the most outstanding book published by an Ohio historian and in doing so has highlighted the many other fine books entered in the competition. Our newsletter provides the only record of state-wide departmental activities, including lists of articles and essays published in an astoundingly wide array of journals. We recognized one person a year for outstanding classroom teaching. We also annually honor outstanding career achievements and distinguished service to the profession and the Academy. From time-to-time we have entered certain struggles to advance in the state the overall interests of history as a discipline and institutional practice.

I am happy to report that as far as I know no governor nor budget crisis threatens us and we seem to have ridden safe and secure above the turbulence of money shortages, demographic decline, and reduced services. Peter Novick, author of the acclaimed, That Noble Dream observed recently that "with all its faults, the organized American historical profession, particularly in recent decades, has been the most ideologically open, the least exclusionary, of any such body in the world. And within the American academic world it continues to compare favorably in this respect to most other disciplines." Novick, announced that "concerning the historical profession if very little else, I'm quite cheerful enough." In the same vein, I am quite sure that the Ohio Academy of History is the best state organization of its kind. My only fear as president is that I do not mess up a machine, the Academy, that works very well.

Fortunately, many of my colleagues in the state have agreed to serve the Academy through its council, several committees and their combined talent might be enough even to counter my infinite capacity not to get it done. I urge you to peruse the committee list and send them a silent salute. The chairpersons, in particular those of the program committee, the publication award committee, and the teaching award committee, depend directly on your enthusiastic response to calls for papers and nominations. The distinguished service award committee and the nomination committee will also need the membership's response to their entreaties for worthy candidates. So, even though this Academy is stable despite the shocking changes about it, as always it depends upon the kindness and active participation of its members. Please respond to the chairperson's urgent calls that come your way.

Having pledged to try not to do harm, I do, however, have some small hopes for the Academy this year, mostly based on following up the work of past presidents and past committees who have worked hard to make the Academy better. Despite the attention paid to the need for improved class room teaching paid by high profile national study committees and by eloquent remarks by our members, our annual program meeting has not paid as much attention to the problems and opportunities that surround teaching. This is not because program committees have left such proposals on the decision table, but rather because they have received so few proposals. Our members say they want such services. Let's do it this year and in the year to come. Richard Ortquist, a former O.A.H. president, chaired an ad hoc membership committee and his excellent report is still before the council for consideration and I will try to implement the action the Council wants. Former president Jake Dorn chaired a study committee that surveyed our membership to discern how we could improve the Academy. Some of those ideas still remain unfinished and we need to put them to work. I have volunteered to undertake pulling together several research interest groups in the state, an effort put underway by Ortquist. Active groups could, at a minimum, endeavor to propose structured program ideas for the annual meeting that might involve major professors in that state.

We have always tried to have our spring meeting in or about Columbus, the geographic center of the state. Certain schools have born the burden of local arrangements over and over. For example, our spring meeting will be again at Wittenberg University, and the members of that department have given of their time and effort often, as have those at Ohio Wesleyan, Capital, and Denison. The logistics of meeting at Ohio State have been almost impossible to overcome in recent years. This last spring we met at Wright State, which was a lengthy drive from the far northern regions of the state. We will experiment again spring after next, meeting at Kent State. Nevertheless, its risky business we are about, threatening the attendance at our annual program meeting. I will explore this issue as best I can and see if there is some reasonable solution to the problems of the annual meeting site. Your best thoughts are eagerly sought by myself and the council.

I thank the members of the Academy for the opportunity to serve you. In 1962 I arrived at Wooster and Clayton Ellsworth, later himself to be a president of the O.A.H., promptly recruited me into the activities of the O.A.H. I have always enjoyed the good company, the good shop talk, and the many excellent sessions I have attended. My charge to the membership is to respond to the committees' requests and this year commandeer an unsuspecting colleague or two and come on down to the Cincinnati Historical society for the fall meeting and later show up at Wittenberg for the Academy's spring meeting - always there for you at a bargain price!

NOTICE TO MEMBERSHIP

The vitality of the Academy rests in its members and the various committees. For the organization to flourish these committees need membership input. This is especially true for the following which earnestly solicit your aid.

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARD. Please send nominations for the Distinguished Service Award or requests for information to James Lee Burke, History Department, Capital University, Columbus, OH 43209-2394.

NOMINATING COMMITTEE. Please send nominations for President Elect, Secretary-Treasurer, and two Council seats to Christine Worobec, History Department, Bowman Hall, Kent State University, Kent, OH 44242-0001.

PROGRAM COMMITTEE. A call for either individual or session proposals is issued with an early November, 1992 deadline. Send proposals or inquiries to Austin Kerr, History Department, Ohio State University, 230 W. 17th Ave., Columbus, OH 43210-1367.

PUBLICATIONS COMMITTEE. Books may be nominated by any member of the Ohio Academy of History, postmarked no later than Dec. 1, 1992. The committee will favor a well-crafted, well-written monograph dealing with a significant topic and based on extensive research in primary sources. The committee will also consider a well-written synthesis that is based largely on secondary sources but provides an interesting and original way of understanding the past. The committee will not consider books that are basically edited works or intended primarily as classroom materials. To make a nomination the nominator or author must send one copy of the book to each of the four members of the committee. Nominations, together with a brief (50-75 words) synopsis of the book for publication in the Academy's Newsletter, must reach committee members by Dec. 1, 1992. Books should be sent to the following: Roberta Alexander, Department of History, University of Dayton, Dayton, OH 45469-2265; John Gates, Department of History, College of Wooster, Wooster, OH 44691; Steven H. Miner, Department of History, Ohio University, Bentley Hall, Athens, OH 45701; and R. Vladimin Steffel, Ohio State University, Marion Campus, 1465 Mt. Vernon Ave. Marion, OH 44302.

TEACHING AWARD. For complete information concerning this award please contact David Kyvig, University of Akron, Akron, OH 44325-1902.

EDITOR'S NOTES

In this, the first edition of the Ohio Academy of History Newsletter where I have served as editor, I would like to express my sincere appreciation to Stuart Givens, all of the other OAH officers, and members of the Academy who have so generously given of their time and so promptly mailed in their institutional information. Thanks also to all those who wrote expressing their congratulations and extending their best wishes to me as the new editor.

Periodically I intend to utilize this section to bring matters of special importance to your attention as well as to introduce changes/additions in the Newsletter. Your comments and suggestions are both welcomed and encouraged.

A new feature is a column devoted to archives in Ohio Archivist Corner. It is hoped that archivists in the state will send in a general description of their facility and the nature of their collections. Each addition will feature an archive. In addition, as archives acquire new collections they will be recorded in the Archivist Corner of the Newsletter. Special appreciation goes to Nancy C. Erdey, archivist at University Hospitals of Cleveland, for her assistance. Accordingly they will be the first featured archives in the new column.

The Ohio Academy of History
Executive Council
Friday, 10 April 1992

The meeting was called to order by Jacob Dorn, president, at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio. Members present were C. Alexander, S. Chu, J. Dorn, S. Givens, J. Hodges, J. Hubbell, R. Lora, and V. Steffel. Also present were J.D. Britton (Standards), K. Bryant (Program), W. Chessman (Historian), and R. Ortquist (ad hoc Membership).

1. President's Comments

Jacob Dorn welcomed members of the Executive Council and briefed them on the spring meeting.

2. Minutes of 4 October 1991 meeting

The Executive Council agreed that the phrase in 3.A., "the winter issue would be devoted to teaching" should be changed for clarification to read: "the winter issue would be devoted to various topics of interest." Ron Lora moved, Charles Alexander seconded the motion, to accept the minutes as clarified. Motion passed.

3. Networking Recommendations Revisited

The work carried out by Richard Ortquist to establish a networking of historians in Ohio was reviewed. The problem to date had been that many historians expressed interest in networking, but too few have agreed to coordinate the groups. After discussion, James Hodges agreed to seek find leaders for as many groups as possible.

4. Report of ad hoc Committee on Membership

A copy of the report presented to the Executive Council at the October meeting is appended to these Minutes.

Dorn first reviewed what had been done at the fall meeting. Recommendations 1 and 2 were agreed to. Recommendation 3 was rejected. Recommendation 4 was being implemented informally, but the question was how to do it effectively. Recommendation 5 was not to be implemented at this time. Recommendation 6 to expand the Newsletter was being done. Recommendation 7 was agreed to. Recommendation 8 had been agreed to before the report. Recommendations 9 and 11-13 were in abeyance; recommendation 10 had been done. Recommendation 14 to design a new brochure was being done.

The discussion focused in item 4, how to identify history department recruiters. One suggestion was that members of the Executive Council recruit in their departments. For large departments there is a need for a loose network. It must be accepted that some will not join. Britton volunteered to contact all public historians.

Hubbell recommended that the President write to each department chair at least once or twice a year to overcome inertia. He suggested the President call the chairs of the largest departments and also discuss the spring program.

Dorn determined that recommendations 9-16, except 14, be deferred to next meeting; each item required at least 20 to 30 minutes for discussion. He thought that the Council should consider itself a continuing ad hoc membership committee.

Dorn suggested that the Executive Council should meet at least three times per year.

5. Secretary-Treasurer's Report

Givens moved, Chu seconded the motion, to accept the Treasurer's report.

Steffel informed the Council that the new Roster would be in the mail by the end of the month.

6. Newsletter

Givens reported that in the forthcoming Newsletter items of greater interest, such as History Day, would be featured in the front and Academy news would be placed at the back.

7. Nominations Committee

Dorn, on behalf of Boyer, chair, announced the slate to be presented at the Business Meeting.

8. Program Committee

Bryant submitted a written report and emphasized that the committee had sought presenters from outside history. The committee turned down many good papers because not enough space was available. One problem was pairing papers; he suggested that individuals put whole sessions of papers together. The committee tried to include as many women and minorities as possible. Another problem was getting chairs and commentators. Bryant echoed Clayton Koppes suggestion that the program start on Friday afternoon or include more sessions on Saturday.

Dorn recommended that the Council consider the suggestion at its October meeting.

9. Standards Committee

Britton submitted, a written report and stressed 1) that there was a "threat" that history may be taking a back seat to a general social studies content if the State Board of Education is allowed to solely develop the new social studies curriculum in grades K-12, and 2) OAH support/endorsement of National/Ohio History Day." He added that the relocation of National History Day to Washington meant that Ohio History Day is restructuring itself. He continued:

However, the committee did ask that next year's committee consider the following:

- a) One year free OAH membership to teachers who have students go on to the national competition.
- b) Winning student and teacher names be published in the OAH newsletter each year.
- c) OAH appoint an OAH member to handle relations between the Academy and Ohio History Day.
- d) Publicize the theme of Ohio History Day and possibly tie the theme into the OAH annual, meeting, history ...the committee felt that the threat to curriculum in grades K-12 may be the result of teachers not being adequately prepared to teach history and not being able to relate the value of history to their students. This may be due to education majors being required to take only two history courses as part of their degree requirements and because their social studies degree does not require that they take a historical methodology course. To investigate this matter, the committee recommends that OAH authorize the Standards Committee to design a survey to be sent to the history teachers in Ohio. The survey would ask them to provide information: including a list of the history courses they took while in college, requirements and electives. A draft questionnaire was provided. Britton apologized for not preparing a committee description. He noted that the committee discerned an identity crisis: for whom are the standards? All historians include history professors, history teachers, practicing public historians in historical societies, museums, and businesses, archivists, preservation historians, and private consultants. He concluded by noting that the consensus of the committee was to continue in the direction it was going and continue defining its role.

10. Spring Meeting

Kent State will host the 1994 spring meeting.

11. Adjournment

The meeting was adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,

Vladimir Steffel
Secretary-Treasurer

REPORT OF THE AD HOC COMMITTEE ON MEMBERSHIP OF THE OHIO ACADEMY OF HISTORY

The committee met at Wittenberg and first discussed who the prospective and potential members could be. These included, college faculty, emeriti, archivists, personnel in historical societies and museums, editors, writers, researchers, secondary teachers, government officials, archeologists, and those generally considered at-large. We considered the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Future of the Academy. We came up with suggestions, recognizing that some of them would cost money to implement. We did not list them in any order of preference or priority.

The following list represents our recommendations/suggestions for attracting new members and retaining current members:

1. Continue the free first year membership for new faculty members, but clarify the timing of a membership (i.e., when it begins and when a membership expires.) Perhaps, if it is not now the case, all memberships could have their renewal date as of the Spring meeting and payable at registration for those attending. Publicize the renewal dates well in advance.
2. Broaden recruiting incentives to first-year members to include other than faculty members of colleges and universities (such as, newly hired museum or archive employees.) If not a free membership, at least offer them a discount for the first year.
3. Investigate piggy backing Ohio Academy membership on the AHA membership form and/or on other organizations' forms.
4. Assign individuals in each department/institution to promote membership in the Academy. Have that person clearly identified and especially target certain large institutions.
5. Develop an Academy publication (i.e. journal) that would
 - 1.) appeal to the general reader; one that might include some reviews and discussions of issues, and/or
 - 2.) publish as articles, some of the best papers delivered at the Spring meeting of the Academy; and /or
 - 3.) be an opportunity for high quality papers submitted by undergraduate and graduate students (something like the Wittenberg Review.)

6. Turn the Newsletter into a publication more like the AHA's Perspectives. [Committee members: Since we met in August, I have learned that a third number of the Newsletter will appear annually and will be devoted entirely to teaching.]
7. Develop and include more sessions on teaching at the Spring meeting.
8. Distribute information about meetings further in advance (for both Fall and Spring meetings) even if it means going to first class mailing.
9. Identify certain secondary teachers who can and will work on Academy committees: initiate a standing committee of high school teachers and have sessions on the program especially geared to them.
10. Encourage History Departments in the state to send copies of their newsletters to the editor of the Academy's Newsletter.
11. Have the Ohio Academy of History endorse quality programs in the state (i.e., symposia, workshops, History Day, etc.) and provide a calendar of such events in an Academy publication.
12. Present an annual award to a distinguished high school teacher of history. Such an award could include one year's free membership.
13. Develop a fund for assisting non-college faculty persons who are engaged in research (i.e., curators, museum personnel, etc.)
14. Substantially revise, update and improve the brochure distributed by the Academy, emphasizing that the Academy is not devoted to state and local history.
15. Engage a professional to design an eye-catching poster to publicize meetings of the Academy; this same design could be used as the cover of the Spring meeting program. Hire a professional to design a logo for the Academy.
16. Invite Ohio Program in the Humanities people to be involved in the activities of the Academy. Keep them informed about the Academy and its activities. Hold joint meetings of the executive councils of the two organizations.

THE OHIO ACADEMY OF HISTORY BUSINESS MEETING

Saturday, 11 April 1992

1. Welcome

Jacob Dorn welcomed the Academy to Wright State University and reiterated President Mulhollan's Friday evening comments. He thanked the committee chairs for their devoted work on behalf of the Academy.

2. Secretary-Treasurer's Report

Vladimir Steffel thank the committee chairs for their assistance in facilitating Academy business. He noted that a new Roster would be in the mail by the end of the month.

3. Nominating Committee

Richard Boyer, chair, distributed a biographical sketch of the candidates for office. He placed in nomination Stuart Givens for president elect/vice president; Vladimir Steffel for Secretary-Treasurer; Donna L. VanRaaphorst for editor, Newsletter; and J.D. Britton, James Borchert, Richard Spall, and Richard McMaster for the Executive Council. There were no nominations from the floor.

4. Teaching Award

Donna Van Broekhoven, for Lawrence Kaplan, chair, presented the Award for Excellence in Teaching to James Huffman, Wittenberg. The following was excerpted, from the citation:

Over the past twenty years, this year's honoree has distinguished himself with numerous publications in his specialty. The comment volunteered by colleagues and students about his teaching all suggest, however, that it was not expertise alone, but rather his combined abilities "to listen: to explain, to encourage, [and]... to inspire" that have won him student respect.

He "is exceptional at connecting the academic world with the personal world." "... he not only shares himself through, the academic world, but is sensitive to his students lives... He knows that gender, class and race affect how his students... learn about the world... In an intense class... he did not condemn students with different values than his own, but... made them defend... the values they had."

"I have taken several classes... and have eagerly anticipated and regretfully left each one. I learned a great deal..., not only in the subject studied, but from him as a person. Learning is important, but how it is learned is equally... important."

"He is an educator. The knowledge I gained... helped... prepare me for life, not just graduation. Not only does he instruct, he motivates students to learn and more importantly to think!"

5. Distinguished Service Award

David Fahey, chair, presented Arnold Schrier, Cincinnati, the Distinguished Service Award. The following was excerpted from the citation:

Arnold Schrier joined the University of Cincinnati history department in 1956, the year that Northwestern University awarded him the Ph.D. degree. His initial specialization was American immigration history, and his first book, published in 1958 and reprinted in 1970, was entitled Ireland and the American Emigration, 1850-1900. Soon he retrained as a Russian historian, with a fellowship from the American Council on Learned Societies and the Social Science Research Council. Particularly interested in Russian travelers to the United States, he translated and edited the journal of a Tsarist bureaucrat who visited America in 1857. The University of Chicago Press published this book in 1979. Schreier also established himself in the field of world history and directed an early NEH summer institute on world history for high school teachers. His colleagues praise him as a classroom teacher in whatever field he taught. He shared his knack for making history important and interesting in a number of European, Western Civilization, and world history textbooks. In 1989 he was a delegate to the Joint United States - USSR Textbook Study Commission.

Arnie Schrier has received recognition many times before today. He has been a visiting faculty member at Northwestern, Indiana, and Duke and in 1983-84 distinguished visiting professor at the Air Force Academy. He served for many years at Cincinnati as his Department's director of graduate studies. He was honored by the University of Cincinnati in 1972 with appointment as Walter C. Langsam professor of modern European history. In 1973-74 Schrier served as president of the Ohio Academy of History. In 1980 he was president of the Midwest Slavic Conference. In 1988-90 he was president of an international organization, The World History Association. Currently he is the founding president of a regional affiliate, the Ohio Valley World History Association. The Cincinnati colleague who nominated him described Schrier's career as one that "literally defines balance" in an age of hyperspecialization and described the man as "an extraordinarily humane" individual.

6. Outstanding Book Award

Zane Miller, chair, awarded Christine Worobec, Kent State, the Outstanding Book Award for her study Peasant Russia. The following was excerpted from the citation:

Peasant Russia is the first book to take a comprehensive look at peasant life in Central Russia in the decades immediately following serf emancipation. Using a variety of methods derived from the fields of family history, anthropology, ethnography, and women's studies, Worobec explores the world of peasant households and communities. She argues that peasant Russia retained its traditional institutions and customary practices despite the economic changes associated with Russia's industrialization and urbanization. Previously unexamined judicial, folklore, and household records, as well as more conventional sources, provide the foundation for her argument supporting the durability and viability of the extended Russian peasant family and her examination of the customs linking family and community.

7. Report from Nominating Committee

Richard Boyer reported the results of the election: Stuart Givens was elected president elect/vice president; Vladimir Steffel was elected secretary-treasurer; Donna L. VanRaaphorst was elected editor of the Newsletter; J.D. Britton and Richard Spall were elected to the Executive Council.

8. Presidential Address

Before James Hodges gave his Presidential Address "Out of Step: The Modern Presidency and the Presidential Rating Game," he had members rate the presidents from Franklin Delano Roosevelt through Ronald Reagan. His talk focused on past presidential polls, criteria, and results. At the end of the talk he gave the results of his OAH poll. OAH historians ranked those presidents in the following order (from best to worst): FDR, Truman, Eisenhower, Johnson, Reagan, Nixon, Carter, Ford.

9. Adjournment

Jacob Dorn adjourned the meeting.

Respectfully submitted,

RETIREMENTS

BOWLING STATE UNIVERSITY

PATRICK ALSTON retired in the spring of 1992 after 21 years on the Bowling Green Faculty. He had taught previously at the University of Iowa and Coe College. He received his doctorate in Russian history at the University of California at Berkeley. His research interests focused on the history of education and military history. He was the author of Education and the State in Tsarist Russia, and has served as editor since 1976 of East/West Education: A Journal of History. Besides courses in Russian History, he introduced offerings on World War II and on 20th Century Military history. His fascination with military history will be continued in retirement as he and his wife move to Gettysburg.

BERNARD STERNESHER retired in the spring of 1992 after 23 years at Bowling Green. He had taught previously at Rochester Institute of Technology, Farleigh Dickinson, and Seton Hall. He received his Ph.D. from Boston University, and his dissertation, Rexford Tugwell and the New Deal, was published by Rutgers University Press and received the Phi Alpha Theta Book Prize. His second book, Consensus, Conflict, and American Historians, published by Indiana University Press in 1975, remains a standard work on American historiography. The author of numerous other works on 20th century American history and historiography he was accorded in 1979 the title of Distinguished University Professor. He has taught a number of upper level and graduate course in recent American history and historiography, has served on numerous MA and Ph.D. student committees, and has been a major contributor to the Department's building of an emphasis in public history. He will participate in the University's supplemental retirement plan, so that he will offer courses in the spring semester through 1995.

KENT STATE UNIVERSITY

COLBURN V. GRAVES retired at the end of June, 1992. He earned his Ph.D. at the University of Chicago in 1955 and joined the faculty at Kent State University in 1961 as the departments' professor of medieval history. He became the department chairperson in 1983. He and his wife will live in Maine.

HAROLD SCHWARTZ retired at the end of June, 1992 after 35 years on the Kent State University faculty. Professor Schwartz will continue to reside in Kent, Ohio.

DEATHS

SHERMAN BISBEE BARNES, Kent State University Emeritus Professor of History was killed in an automobile accident on July 22, 1992.

Born in New York on May 7, 1905, he attended Mount Herman School in Massachusetts from 1921-25 and entered Columbia University upon graduation. In 1929 he graduated from Columbia with a Phi Beta Kappa membership and completed a doctoral program at Cornell University in 1934.

Barnes was an Assistant Professor at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, Ill. from 1935 to 1945, and in 1946 he worked as an Assistant Professor at the Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh. An expert in European history, Barnes served as a Professor of history at KSU from 1946 until his retirement in 1975.

BRADLEY CHAPIN died on December 1, 1991. He was born in Silver Creek, New York, in 1925, and after service in World War II took his bachelor's and master's degrees from Buffalo and, in 1951, his Ph.D. from Cornell. After teaching at Buffalo, where he became Dean of University College, in 1966 he came to Ohio State as Professor and Chair of the Department. In 1967, he returned to the teaching for which he will long be remembered by countless undergraduate and a very large number of graduate students. He received the OSU Alumni Award for Distinguished Teaching in 1986. He also published regularly in early American constitutional and legal history, and his Early America (1968, revised 1984) was widely used as a textbook. Although he was ill after his retirement in 1987, he continued to write. His last two articles appeared in 1987 and 1990. Both appeared in the Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography. His other books include The American Law of Treason (1963) and Criminal Justice in Colonial America, 1606-1660 (1983).

JOHN W. CULVER, Case Western Reserve University history professor died July 26, 1992.

Born in Mountain Home, Idaho in 1907, he received his doctorate degree from the University of Madison in 1938. Here he went on to become well-known in Wisconsin with a radio program called "The Story Behind the News." He left Madison to become director of an American Friends Service Committee work camp in Tennessee. Four years later, the Council of Learned Societies and the State Department invited him to direct the Institute of Brazilian-American Culture in Sao Paulo, Brazil. He became fluent in Portuguese and taught English and American literature at the American Language Institute over the radio in Brazil. He had a similar mission in Santiago, Chile. In 1955, he taught at the University of Puerto Rico.

While at Case Western Reserve, Professor Culver was often invited to teach at other universities including the University of Wisconsin, University of Puerto Rico, University of Arizona, University of Sao Paulo, and the University of Chile. He was foreign-student adviser at Case Western, advisor to Phi Kappa Tau fraternity, and in 1975, advisor to the Peace Corps in Greater Cleveland.

MELVIN DRIMMER, Cleveland State University Professor died on June 17, 1992.

Born in 1935, Drimmer was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the City College of New York and attended Oxford University. He earned his doctorate in history at the University of Rochester in 1965. His teaching career began at Hunter College in New York in 1960 and then he taught at Spelman College in 1963. Drimmer was, in addition, a Visiting Professor at New York University, Colgate University, and Dillard University. He also had a post-doctoral fellow at Harvard University's W.E.B. DuBois Institute from 1981-84.

Professor Drimmer came to Cleveland State University in 1972 and served as Chairperson until 1974. Over the years, he published numerous articles and books. He was the author of Black History: A Reappraisal and Issues in Black History.

HENRY N. WHITNEY, chairman of the History Department at Kent State from 1961 to 1983, died in Kent on April 28, 1992, at the age of 77. He was an active member of the Ohio Academy throughout his career at Kent, beginning with his appointment as assistant professor in 1947. A native of Middletown, Connecticut, and a graduate of Wesleyan and Pennsylvania Universities, Whitney had served in the Army in World War II and taught at Lebanon Valley College before coming to Kent.

During his many years on the faculty Professor Whitney was recognized as a successful teacher with an easy informal manner that was appreciated by his students. His major achievement was his management of the department during the years of growth in the 1960s and the years of strain in the 1970s. He rarely failed to achieve consensus through his famous jawboning with the faculty. Much of the credit for expanding the faculty and welding it into a successful unit belonged to him. In the course of doing this he won the respect - and even more important - the affection of his colleagues. As one of the junior members observed years ago when asked how he would vote on Whitney's retention as chairman, "to vote against him would be like voting against my father." He will be missed.

ARCHIVIST CORNER

Archives, University Hospitals of Cleveland
2074 Abington Road
Cleveland, Ohio 44106

Established in 1968, the Archives of University Hospitals of Cleveland is the oldest hospital archives in the city. Its primary function is to document the historical development of the hospitals for present and future use.

The collection is composed of over 3,000 linear feet of material related to the development and functioning of the hospitals from 1961 to the present. The photographic collection of over 6,000 items (from 1890s to the day) documents every facet of the hospitals' history, personnel, and functions. In addition the archives collects the papers of physicians, administrators, trustees, and other persons associated with the hospitals.

The archives has the personal and professional papers of Claude Beck (cardiovascular surgery), David Marine (endocrinology/iodination of salt), Hymer Friedell (radiology/radiation studies), Benjamin Spock (child development), John Kenwell (pediatrics/maternal and infant bonding), Leroy Matthews (pediatrics/cystic fibrosis), John Dingle (preventive medicine) and Olga Bendoroff (nursing WWII). The collection on medicine during World War I (Lakeside Unit/France) and World War II (Fourth General Hospital/Australian and the South Pacific) are especially strong and very comprehensive.

The archives maintains extensive collections in hospital administration, nursing, and medical education, focusing on the development and implementation of the New Medical Curriculum of Western Reserve University (now CWRU) at the School of Medicine and its affiliated hospitals.

Currently the archives is participating in a cooperative project with the Archives of Case Western Reserve University, the Metro Health System, and the Veterans Administration Medical Center to process collections related to the development, implementation and evaluation of the New Medical Curriculum at the School of Medicine. A strong oral history component is also planned along with a published guide to the collections and entry on national electronic data bases. The photographic collection is particularly strong in documenting hospital architecture, and maternity and child health from the early twentieth century to the present. Contact: Nancy C. Erdy at the above address for more complete information about the collections.

AROUND AND ABOUT THE PROFESSION

Felix Ekichi, of Kent State University, directed a National Endowment for the Humanities seminar entitled "African Cultures and European Encounter," for high school teachers from all across the country during the summer of 1992. Likewise in the instructional vein, Sharon Bannister of the University of Findlay, teaches a colloquium course entitled, "Women in nineteenth century art, music and society." Bannister provides the historical position of the course, and is joined by an art historian and musician for the other components.

The National Council for History Education, Inc. encourages your continued support. The Council publishes an informative newsletter entitled History Matters; occasional papers, access to the Council's Speaker's Bureau; and, a chance to participate in national policy debates. This past summer the National Council for History Education's Academy for Ohio Teachers was held. There were over forty participants. Many members of the OAH were and are involved in difficult capacities. - Mao thought that a revolution would come from an uprising of the pheasants.
- The buffalo was a wild animal kind of like a cow.
- Bismarck in about 1900 was forced to resign putting an end to the first republic.
- Christianity during this period was thought to be intellectually sexual.

- There was a conflict in the Balkan Islands between Russia and Japan.
- The leader of the Bolshevik revolution was Lennnon.
- Hitler formed the Nazi Party and in time became the self proclaimed Furor.
- We eventually decided that we should help out Great Britain, had a selective service passed and after Pearl Harbor it was decided that we should become involved in the war.
- The Roman Empire was very large and encompassed many lands on the shores of the Carribbean Sea.
- The following was a response to a question about the variations within the institution of slavery - "there was several different types of slavery in the South. The first type was just basic bought slaves and the second was free slaves. The longest slaves were very much against being prisoners, the free slaves were free but they couldn't find jobs to do anything else so they would eventually work as slaves anyway."
