Academia, including our discipline of history, has faced numerous challenges since the Ohio Academy of History was founded during the depths of the Great Depression in 1932. Shortly afterwards came the challenges of World War II, followed by the effects of the GI Bill and the arrival of baby boomers. And some of my colleagues might remember the problems of the Vietnam War era with the traditional comment of non-performing students: “If you fail me in this course, you will send me to Vietnam!” Today we face a variety of other challenges, but many of these are primarily financial, both on the national and state levels. We are asked to prepare the next generation of professionals with limited funds but with the latest technology. We find that the so-called STEM disciplines are emphasized to the detriment of the humanities. Technology is significant to many political leaders, while critical thinking and knowledge of the past remain unimportant to them. All we have to do is notice the misuse of history by a number of our political leaders across the United States today. Perhaps Richard Hofstadter was correct about the basic anti-intellectualism of American society.

Nonetheless, I do not want to dwell totally on “gloom and doom” but rather on the positives. As the new president of the Ohio Academy of History, I am proud of the accomplishments of my colleagues across the state in a wide variety of disciplines. What I saw and heard at our spring conference at Denison University (ably hosted by Donald Schilling) was impressive. I was proud of the quality of the work of professional historians in Ohio. Included in this category was a noticeable number of doctoral students who “tested the waters” of the academic conference and successfully demonstrated the depths of their research. What a superb venue to commence an academic career! And I must laud the work of John Jordan and others by welcoming secondary school teachers actively to the work of the Academy. They are the ones who create a solid base for students to discover the wonders of history as well as its necessity in understanding the complexities of the world in which we live and function.

At this time I must applaud the relationship that continues to evolve with (Continued on page 6)

   —Seal design.

4. Sosnowski thanked Dorn for work on the Taft panel.

5. Dorn had a lot of collaboration with standards and public history committees, and was very impressed with their work.

B. Vice-President/President Elect’s Report: Tom Sosnowski

D. Secretary-Treasurer’s Report: Kevin Kern
   —Sosnowski moved, Wood seconded, unanimously approved

E. Archivist’s Report: Betsy MacLean
   —Submitted written report.
   —Handbook revisions were main issue of concern this year.
   —MacLean is trying to get to a schedule of every year after spring meeting, amending the handbook every year after the Spring meeting. Hedler said revising website would be no problem.
   —Rationale for constitutional amendment: MacLean said the goal was making it a more useful document. The Executive Committee has a lot of resolutions that get passed, but these are not in the constitution and are recorded nowhere except minutes.
   —MacLean will try to assemble

all resolutions of Executive Committee so there is an official record. Sosnowski recommended just collating this material for the last ten years.

—Robinson recommended that these resolutions be on website and searchable.

—MacLean said it would take a while, will report again in fall.

—By consensus, the committee agreed to put past officers and committee members on the website, too.

—MacLean also reported that the OAH does not have a process for replacing the President or Vice-President during year should some thing happen to these officers. Dorn suggested carrying over this issue until next year.

F. Newsletter Editors’ Reports:
Molly Wood and Martin Wainwright
—Wainwright expressed thanks to Hedler for writing the report.
—The newsletter did not get out as early as expected, but it did get out.
—Editors expressed the need to emphasize the new deadlines and their firmness.
—Both hoped for a better looking publication next year.
—Wood added that it was a learning process for all concerned.
—Communications vastly improved, making future publications easier.
—Winkler suggested that in addition to uploading the newsletter to the website, it be emailed to all members. Hedler agreed.
—MacLean asked Wood and Wainwright for newsletter editorial responsibilities changes.

G. Review of Agreement with Ohio Historical Society: Betsy Hedler/Jacob Dorn/Betsy MacLean
—Written report by Hedler. Most significant changes have to do with newsletter, and added reimbursements to OHS.
—Dorn suggested that all correspondence between officers and Hedler be copied to President. This resolution was approved by consensus.

H. Standing Committee Reports:
1. Spring Conference: Donald Schilling
—Local arrangements had worked so far, and Schilling had gotten excellent support from University.
—Dorn moved to show appreciation to Schilling, Winkler seconded. Unanimously approved.

2. Membership: Tom Sosnowski
—no report at moment. Winkler has suggested targeting younger scholars who can’t present at national conferences as easily.

3. Nomination: William Jenkins
Spring Meeting Minutes (Continued)

—Written report submitted, accepted by consensus

4. Program: Marsha Robinson
       —Submitted written report
       —There were many unfortunate events: accidents, and illness took their toll on the program.
       —Many challenges: The process of working with Proceedings to get improvements for nominating papers did not work. Opting out of consideration worked, but changes in the peer review section did not work.
       —Because there was no willing pool of volunteers to have two people per panel, Robinson recommended going back to just one person reviewing per panel.
       —Robinson suggested creating a committee for Proceedings, as it was too much work for program committee. Dorn recommended deferring to President with additional recommendations to the editors of the Proceedings.
       —Connell moved, Jordan seconded to support Robinson's recommendations. Unanimously approved.
       —Winkler said that Program Committee should not wait until Fall 2011 to start work on program—it needs to be acted on in the summer. He suggested that the committee front-load “celebrities” before the call so people know who will be there. Dorn suggested making this in writing to the new president.

I. Award Committee Reports:
1. Dissertation: Christine Anderson
   —Michael Mwende Kithinji, BGSU
2. Distinguished Historian: Jacob Dorn
   —Alonzo Hamby
3. Distinguished Service: Vlady Steffel
   —no nominations
4. Junior Faculty Research Fund: Barbara Ramusack
   —Three applications, Megan Threlkeld was winner.
   —Ramusack said the committee needed more publicity for this award, and that nominees should make sure they know how to write a grant. OAH should bring this award up at department meetings and notify junior faculty.
   —Ramusack also suggested the need to introduce rotation in the committee.
5. Publication: T. J. Boisseau/Bradley Keefer (neither present)
   —Four nominations. Carter V. Findley
6. Public History: Christie Weininger
   —Two nominations: Euclid Corridor project in Cleveland was winner.
7. Teaching: David Hogan
   —no nominations.
   —The issue was raised regarding the responsibility for informing recipients of awards and other nominees. The handbook’s wording was read into the record: [“The Chairperson should inform unsuccessful nominees with an appropriate letter. (Individualized email is acceptable, but a mass-email message that reveals addressees and is not personalized is not.”).

J. Book Exhibit: Jonathan Winkler
   —The OAH was trying a book exchange this year, with proceeds going to the academy.

K. Potential Uses of OAH Seal: Jonathan Winkler
   —Dorn suggested using the seal with correspondence, etc., and have it on letterhead.
   —Winkler suggested that the Secretary-Treasurer be the contact person with vendors like Café Press for uses of seal.

II. NEW BUSINESS

A. Consideration of establishing a policy for archiving of conference papers: Betsy MacLean

B. Co-sponsorship and Financial Support of Ohio Statehood Day: Betsy MacLean
   —Connell moved. Weininger seconded to officially support/co-sponsor Statehood Day at a cost of $200/yr. Winkler made a friendly amendment to make this a matter of annual approval. Hedler noted that the observance was cancelled this year due to protests over Senate Bill 5 at the capitol, so this year’s money that was already approved will roll over.
   —Motion approved as amended unanimously.

C. Position of Historian: Whether to continue and how to fill: Betsy MacLean

D. Redesign of Website: Request for Volunteers to Serve on Ad Hoc Committee: Jacob Dorn

E. Request to Consider Spring Meeting in 2013 at Bowling Green State University in Collaboration with “War on the Great Lakes” Conference: Scott Martin

F. Deferred to New Business:
1. Public History: Christie Weininger
2. Standards: John Jordan and/or Tim Connell (including proposal for spring workshops for teachers).
3. Proposed Amendment to Constitution to Change Name and Focus of Standards Committee: John Jordan/Tim Connell
   —Submitted written report.
   —Jordan: Wants to change name and mission of standards committee—trying to focus on influencing content standards, professional development for K-12, and approval of social studies educational programs.
   —Jordan expressed a need to focus on quality history teaching: having a K-12 professional development and outreach committee.
   —The Executive Council agreed to give free membership for one year for K-12 teachers.
   —Jordan moved to approve the amendment.
   —Winkler and Robinson suggested changes to the amendment to be incorporated before it came to a vote. They suggested that, until then, the Standards Committee should act according to the tenets

the Ohio Historical Society. This is the organization that inspired the founding of the Academy almost eighty years ago, and I am delighted that this special partnership continues today. As an ex-officio member of the Historical Society’s Board of Trustees, I attended the June meeting and the July retreat where I was welcomed and made to feel a part of their community. This kind of friendly relationship is very important to our discipline, and working together will result in future successes especially with the challenges historical studies face. Symbolic of this affinity is that our next spring meeting (March 30-31, 2012) will be held at the Ohio Historical Center in Columbus. That will also present a good opportunity for many of us who are not dévotés of Ohio history to discover some of its fascination in the Society’s many thought-provoking and impressive exhibits.

In the Academy’s efforts to encourage quality, it honors a number of historians with special awards for their accomplishments. For example, the Publication Award was given this year to Carter V. Findley of Ohio State University for his Turkey: Islam, Nationalism, and Modernity. But kudos also extend to Michael Kithinji from Bowling Green State University, who was honored with the Dissertation Award. This award has been a significant means to encourage superb scholarship by the doctoral students at Ohio’s universities. In addition, our discipline fosters other facets of history besides archival work and “book learning.” It includes the activities of our colleagues in museums and other venues. Public history is a major cornerstone of the profession and the Spring 2011 Public History Award for the Euclid Corridor project in Cleveland is most deserving. I have seen only a part of it—but WOW! Such imagination and such talent coupled with impeccable research! And what a group collaborated to create the project—including Mark Tebeau, Mark Souther, and Erin Bell of Cleveland State University, along with Greg Peckham of Cleveland Public Art. Alonzo Hamby of Ohio University deserves special mention as the Distinguished Historian whose thought-provoking presentation on the Friday evening of our spring conference was sheer intellectual delight. And finally the “new” honor approved by the Academy last year was the much needed Junior Faculty Research Award, and its first recipient was Megan Threlkeld at Denison University. It is their work that highlights the vibrancy of historical studies in the state of Ohio. Congratulations to all of them—and to all of you for your diligence in pursuing excellence in our discipline.

From its early years, the Academy has been concerned about the quality of history education in Ohio. I would like to turn our attention briefly to that topic. Several years ago, the former Chancellor of the Ohio Board of Regents, Eric (Continued on page 7)
Society of American Indians Centennial Symposium

Please join us at The Ohio State University in Columbus, OH, for the Society of American Indians Centennial Symposium, October 7-9, 2011, as we mark the formation of the SAI in 1911 and consider its many ongoing legacies.

The SAI was the first national American Indian rights organization developed and run by Native people themselves. Its early leaders were assisted by the non-Native sociologist F. A. McKenzie, a professor at Ohio State, who invited six of these leaders to hold a planning meeting on the Ohio State campus in April 1911. While here, they were invited by the OSU President and Columbus city officials to hold the first annual conference of the SAI on the Ohio State campus as well, which they did over the Columbus Day weekend in October 1911. Nearly fifty prominent American Indian leaders, scholars, clergy, educators, writers, artists, and other professionals participated in the conference, as did representatives of the University, the Columbus Mayor’s office, the Ohio Governor’s office, and the national Office of Indian Affairs.

In October 2011, the SAI Centennial Symposium will feature keynote addresses by Philip Deloria (University of Michigan), Robert Warrior (University of Illinois), and K. Tsianina Lomawaima (University of Arizona), a series of “state of the field” Workshops on various SAI figures and issues, and entertainment, including a performance by the renowned Creek poet and musician Joy Harjo on Friday evening. For those who can stay, there will be a bus tour to the nearby Newark Earthworks on Sunday.

For more information, please visit the OSU American Indian Studies program website at www.americanindianstudies.osu.edu. Click on the SAI Symposium tab for a slide show of early SAI images, as well as for information about the symposium program, registration, and lodging.

To have your name listed on the official Program, sign up as a participant for a specific Workshop. Each Workshop is scheduled for two hours and is designed to allow for a wide range of active participation and discussion. We will explore what we already know about the SAI and its legacies, and, importantly, we will ask questions about what we don’t know and need to research further.

Following the symposium, there will be a call for papers for new essays that engage the SAI and its legacies. Please direct inquiries or questions to Chad Allen at allen.559@osu.edu.

Fingerhut, encouraged the Seniors-to-Sophomores Program whereby qualified high school teachers would be able to teach their students college classes in their own schools. The program has undermined the highly successful Post-Secondary Option Program and even the AP (Advanced Placement) Program, while creating a new set of concerns for academia. Without the environment of the college campus, will the students meet the expectations of college expertise? Are they sufficiently mature to succeed and are the standards for admitting them to their programs sufficiently rigorous? And is there sufficient oversight by the sponsoring institution, whether two or four year colleges, to ensure that these survey courses are taught on a college level? Will these adjuncts be visited often, despite geographical problems of distance, to ensure “quality control”? These and other concerns will have to be monitored closely in the future.

Our discipline is special since it opens the minds of our students to worlds beyond their families and friends. They discover the complexities of our society—indeed that simplistic solutions are usually not possible. All we have to do is watch some of the activities in Washington, Columbus, and . . . ! In addition, we, the practitioners of this discipline, try to overcome prejudice by developing of critical thinking skills among our students. We follow the words of the great South African leader, Archbishop Desmond Tutu: “If you live with hatred and revenge in your heart, you dehumanize not only yourself but your community.” Unfortunately examples abound, but I need only to mention the Taliban or the KKK to confirm this truth.

Finally, I call on all of you to join me in supporting the work of the Ohio Academy of History. If I may be so bold as to quote my predecessor Jacob Dorn in last year’s presidential message: “So let’s all pitch in and give our utmost to a venerable organization! Keep your membership active! Urge your colleagues to enlist! Volunteer for a committee! Propose a panel to the Program Committee! Attend the meetings (and bring a colleague)!” This has been the recipe for the success of the Academy. Or as Harold Davis stated in 1942, the OAH is to “make it[self] an instrument by which historical scholars of the State may assume their rightful responsibility for historical activity within the state along all lines.” I commend my colleagues for their diligence and perseverance for making this possible and charge them to continue on this path of excellence.

—Thomas C. Sosnowski

OBITUARY

Phillip R. Shriver, president of Miami University from 1965-81 and professor of history from 1947-98, died April 23, 2011, at the age of 88.

The much-beloved Shriver was known for his deep fondness for Miami, respect for students, incomparable knowledge of history and, over many decades, remembering the names of everyone he met. Shriver taught at least one class every year except one during his 52 years in the classroom—including the years during which he was Miami’s president and the years when the Vietnam War incited student unrest at dozens of universities, including Miami. His first years in academia were at Kent State University, where he was a professor of American and Ohio history from 1947-65, becoming dean of the College of Arts and Sciences in 1963. In Oxford, his course on the history of Miami was notoriously standing room only, known as much for the depth of the lecture material as for the appeal of the lecturer himself.

“It has been said that more than records, buildings and budgets, the real continuity of a university is the generations of young people who come to us, and older generations who meet with them, deal with them and try to help them into adulthood. This is the essence of teaching,” said Shriver in 1984, explaining why he continued to teach while serving as president of Miami. In 1998, his last year in the classroom he published Miami University: A Personal History.

Shriver, born in Cleveland Aug. 16, 1922, earned a bachelor’s degree at Yale University in 1943, where he was a member of the glee club and a Phi Beta Kappa graduate with honors in history. He served in the Navy from 1943-46, earned a master’s in history from Harvard University in 1946 and earned a doctorate in American history from Columbia University in 1954. He received honorary degrees from ten other American colleges and universities.

Shriver and the late Chief Floyd Leonard of the Miami Tribe worked together to build a mutually enriching relationship between the tribe and the university. Over the years, they jointly presented history programs about both Miamis. Today, the relationship includes the Myaamia Project, a language reclamation project; a scholarship program for tribal students; shared research resources and many cultural programs.

During his 16-year tenure as the university’s 17th president, Miami opened new campuses in Middletown, Hamilton and Luxembourg. Miami’s first 10 doctoral programs were introduced. 30 buildings were constructed on three campuses, the Western College for Women was acquired, total enrollment nearly doubled and Miami gained recognition as one of the nation’s 20 most selective public universities, as well as one of the best values in higher education.

Shriver served on the Ohio Humanities Council from 1983-89 and as a member of the Organization of American Historians, American Studies Association and others. He has written or co-written seven books and more than 200 articles relating to history and archaeology. A former chair and trustee of the Ohio Historical Society, Shriver was instrumental as chairman of Ohio’s Bicentennial Commission for the Northwest Ordinance and the U.S. Constitution. Other service includes having served as chairman of the Council of Presidents of the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges and chairman of the board of the Federal Reserve Bank of Cincinnati. Locally, he was an active member of the Oxford Rotary Club and the Oxford Presbyterian Church and had a lifelong association with Delta Upsilon fraternity.

Shriver received the 1991 Distinguished Service Award from the Ohio Academy of History, the Ohio Humanities Council’s 2001 Bjornson Award for Distinguished Service in the Humanities and the 2004 Cincinnati Society of Association Executives Statesman Award, among others. A Navy veteran of World War II, he was inducted into the 2009 class of the Ohio Veterans Hall of Fame.

He is survived by Martha, his wife of 67 years, of Oxford; and children Carolyn (Bill) Shaul, Susan, Melinda (David) Williams, Darcy, and Raymond Scott II (Vicki); eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.
